If this is more FUD, this is disgusting.

Alex Mashinsky, the CEO of Celsius Crypto bank is rumored to be arrested by the FBI. Previously, Yaron Shalem, the Chief Financial Officer of cryptocurrency lender Celsius was arrested for money laundering and other crimes in Nov 2021.

Never mind, that was Nov 2021

Which is crazy, because all people see is the first sentence. These FUD'sters are out in force.

Heard about this last Wednesday and I talked to home 2 times since then

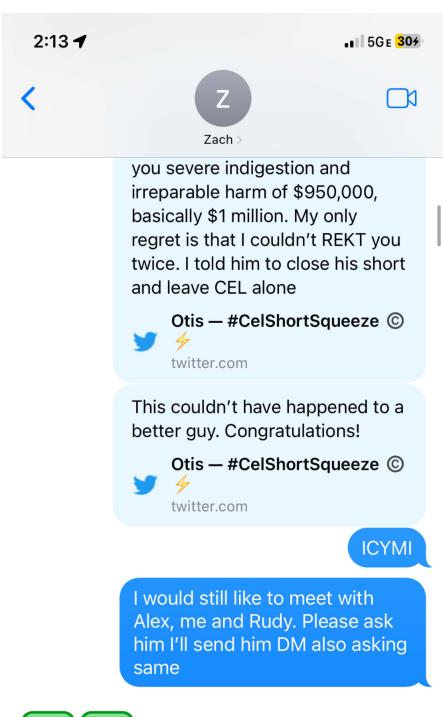

1/3 Just like you liquidated my CEL-back loans, so it is that I liquidated your FTX loan, causing you severe indigestion and irreparable harm of $950.000.

I'm still earning in CEL

Rudy just came up with a brilliant idea regarding CEL. It's about how to turn the CEL token holders into equity holders and if you don't want to want for a potential exit you can sell your CEL token for $1. Call him when you have time and listen to it.

Nothing from Alex yet. Just sent him another message but nothing. This would satisfy all maxis also and all short sellers too. It's pretty nice. He can explain it way better than I can as he's using math and numbers to do it.

want to wait

When he's done, there's no CEL token for sale on exchanges and no one will hold CEL unless you have equity in the company. And you can either self-custody your equity (CEL) or give it to GK8 to custody for you in cold storage until the company goes public.

I need Mashinsky to hold the line and resist any type of bankruptcy.

This is only good for short sellers, to make them believe that Celsius is going to file.

PlanC has now teamed up with Simon Dixon to replace Mashinsky or take away control and give it to Bitcoin maxis (proposal 2); or remove Alex and the senior management and install a puppet regime that reports to him (proposal 3).

Hey, Mashinsky made many mistakes and even I was thinking he may not survive this and have to leave, but be careful what you wish for. You may wish for Alex to leave and get Simon, who doesn't believe in tokens or have any CEL tokens and don't want any. I'll stick with the devil I know.

Proposal #1: A restructuring to relaunch Celsius and allow depositors to benefit from any recovery through financial engineering.

This involves and full recovery of funds is not guaranteed.

Proposal #2: A pool of the most influential whales in Bitcoin to co-invest with the community.

See the previous series A fund raise that we completed for Celsius here.

We completed a similar disaster recovery offering for Bitfinex in 2016. See case study video here.

Proposal #3: An operational plan that allows a new entity and team to rebuild

Ya I think plan c is drawing conclusions without any facts

But from all of this on chain activity, it's looking more and more like a solution has already been found

> It looks like the solution is time. So let them do what they have to do and take their time and work.

> Simon wants the community behind him so he can put pressure on the board to take his plan and push Alex out of his own company. I would never allow that as a community member, regardless of the mistakes Alex makes. Let us as a community push him out and choose our replacement, not have one selected for us. I know you can't comment on this so don't. Just saying my thoughts.

And he's a larger CEL token holder, it's clear Simon would not make the token a priority

And he's a larger CEL token holder, it's clear Simon would not make the token a priority

I hope the pause goes on for 3 months and he uses the pause to wrap CEL utilities around every inch of the company. Because when he resumes withdrawals, he can't pause again. So the company has to be very strong. Personally I would like to see what he has ready before he open the gates and Rudy and I tell him if that is enough

Then Simon tweets out a poll with me in it talking about giving Celsius updates when he can't give any fucking updates. Only Celsius or Mashinsky can give updates.

Simple question: Should @SimonDixonTwitt be the new CEO of @CelsiusNetwork, oust the board & @Mashinsky before we as a community hear from @Mashinsky, since they're busy right now paying down loans on the blockchain, getting liquidity and making the company healthier by the day?

Three discoveries by Stone formed the basis for his decision to extricate himself from his position as CEO of Celsius KevFi:

- 77. First, Stone became aware that since at least February 2020, Celsius had engaged in a series of transactions designed to artificially inflate the price of CEL tokens. Connor Nolan, head of coin deployment at Celsius, informed Stone that Celsius had used approximately 4,500 bitcoin, with a current value of $90 million, in customer deposits to purchase CEL on the open market between February 2020 and November 2020 to artificially inflate the price.
- 78. The purpose of this scheme was both fraudulent and illegal: Celsius induced customers to be paid in CEL tokens by providing them with higher interest rates. Then by purposefully and artificially inflating the price of the CEL token, Celsius was able pay customers who had elected to receive their interest payments in the form of the CEL token even less of the crypto-asset.
- 79. In addition, by artificially increasing the price of the CEL token, Mashinsky who personally owned hundreds of millions of dollars' worth in CEL token at its height was able to enrich himself considerably.

This @CelsiusNetwork filing is jaw dropping. An array https://t.co/eV4LhamI55
Every page is worse than the last. Legit fucking ponzi documented in three easy steps designed to defraud $CEL investors & depositors.
